Public hearings likely says MLA

Makin optimistic about project

By Mark Chisholm
Makin's Project, initiated by "very optimistic" about getting a forest management plan for his planned 150,000-acre hardwood project in Drayton Valley, said a company official on Monday.

"We're really excited," said Ian Makin, project manager for the Red Deer-based company.

"We're proceeding with the planning for the mill and consulting our clients," added Mr. Makin. The company expects a decision from the provincial government within the next few months and if public hearings are set, they will be held in Drayton Valley.

Alberta Housing will probably cancel its study in Drayton Valley

Alberta Housing Corporation will probably cancel a planned feasibility study on subdivided housing for Drayton Valley as a result of a recent town council decision.

"If council is that sure it doesn't want subdivided housing, the study probably won't go ahead," said Byron Peterson, a program adviser for Alberta Housing, last week.

Town council at its last meeting voted down a motion by councillor Bob Smith to ask a representative of Alberta Housing to appear before council to prepare business for subdivision.

Alberta Housing was planning the study after receiving some encouragement from the former town council before the October 15 decision.

Mr. Peterson said he has not yet received any word from the town about the planned study but if the decision of council is to not proceed, Alberta Housing would not likely continue with the study since the local municipality is required to pay 10 per cent of the study.

The federal and provincial governments pay the remainder of the study under the program.

In the past, he added, on occasion, Alberta Housing would continue with a study, even if a council was not favorable, and then present the results to the council.

"There is no such as our plans now, we only act on a resolution of council," he said.

As far as concerns about creating a new province, or difficulties collecting rent from tenants in subdivided housing, Mr. Peterson said he doesn't happen in most cases.

If the local housing authority set up to manage the subdivided units, he said, and well-respected, there should be no problem, he explained.

The housing authority has control over which tenants are allowed into the subdivided units.

Under the program, low income families rent subdivided units and pay 35 per cent of their income.

Dputy minister of Housing, Murray Macmillan, said last week in an interview that it is not the department's responsibility that subdivided housing creates a new province.

"Wherever we put the housing, we do it in a modest site which fits into the community," he said.

Control which has subdivided housing under the same program include Grande Prairie, Wetaskiwin, Peace River and Camrose.

most areas awarded to another company. Mr. Makin said indicated his company might be willing to bid for the large area west and south of Drayton Valley, which contains a large proportion of hardwood trees.

M.A. Shirley O'Brien told an Eyewitness audience last week that the Makin proposal would "likely" go to public hearings. However, she would not comment further on the matter, saying it would be better to wait until the provincial government announces its decision.

J.A. Stevenson, assistant deputy minister of the Alberta Forest Services, confirmed in an interview that the department and the provincial cabinet are looking at a large area as a result of the Makin proposal.

"One of Makin's proposals, they (the provincial cabinet) are not looking at alternatives to Mr. Makin's specific proposals," he said.

The forestry department, he added, has identified a surplus of wood in the whole area west of Drayton Valley, "and at some point in the future we will recommend to government it be sold."

If the government decides to advertise the whole area for development, which is likely to happen at the moment, said Mr. Stevenson, Makin's project as well as other projects could be considered.

Mr. Stevenson also said the Makin project for Drayton Valley's "pretty good proposal in many respects, especially considering their plans to use hardwoods."

Woman trapped in car 3 hours

A Poncha woman was trapped inside her car for three hours Friday night after a collision with a semi-trailer with near Carleton Place.

Diane Shirley Dykstra, 35, was taken to Edmonton hospital in serious condition.

Steven HCBM, the Drayton Valley fire department, the Drayton Valley ambulance service, and the local emergency assistance team spent three hours trying to free the woman from her car.

The accident occurred on Highway 20 at 7:40 in the evening.

A car heading westbound struck a semi-trailer which was turning onto the highway, going eastbound, according to police.

The driver of the trailer was Donald Babcock of Spruce Grove, was uninjured.

Ms. Dykstra's condition, at press time, was unknown.

Weed growth in Wabamun

ERCB ruling expected within six months

By Dale Luman
An Energy Resources Conservation Board (ERCB) ruling on Calgary Power's Wabamun generating station water use in Lake Wabamun should be issued within six months, according to the utility up to $100 million.

ERCB hearings take the possible effects of water discharge on the growth of the weed "Elodea canadensis" considered two weeks ago, and is now up to the board to decide whether or not the growth of Elodea is affected by warm water.

If the ERCB decides that Elodea growth is hastened by warm water from Calgary Power's Wabamun power plant on the north shore of the lake, installation of cooling facilities could cost as much as $100 million, according to company executive Mervyn Chant.

"We have investigated several alternative cooling methods, and if we were required to install a cooling pond, such as the one at our headquarters plant, it could cost the neighborhood of $100 to $150 million," Mr. Chant says.

The high cost of such an alternative is due to the fact that the pond would have to be located on the north shore of Highway 16, in a mixed-use portion of the company's oil mine.

"That would be the only place we could put a cooling pond, if we are required to install one," Mr. Chant says.

The added expense of installing cooling facilities would be in the $10 million up to $100 million, according to Calgary Power's study which showed that the lake had nothing to do with accelerated growth of Elodea.

The five-year study, carried out by Jack Connelley Ltd., concluded that the weed's growth was affected primarily by the amount of sun heat in lake-bottom mud.

That finding was challenged by cottagers in the area of the discharge outlet, and led to the hearings by the ERCB late this fall.

Jack Rasmussen, of the ERCB's hydro and electric energy division, says the study was carried out at the request of the ERCB when several lake-bottom outcrops comprised about 10 per cent of the lake's bottom.

"At the same time as this study, Calgary Power was also directed to examine water release growth," Mr. Chant says.

Dr. Raymond Bussell, an energy engineer with Knapville Beach adjacent to the cooling pond, said during the hearings that the cooling pond would be used primarily by Elodea Power's Wabamun plant, and that the pond would have to be located on the north shore of Highway 16, in a mixed-use portion of the company's oil mine.

Cynthia grazing reserve

Oil, cattle conflict much greater

By Rick Chabot
A PLANNED 11,244 acre grazing reserve south of Calgary, Alberta, is the first reserve in the province to be closed during the winter months. The reserve is the province's first closed reserve, and the potential for conflict with cattle will be "much greater" than in any other reserve, according to the province's Natural Resources Minister, Rick Chabot.

With oilfield equipment already in place and cattle grazing on the site in five or six years' time, the potential for conflict is high.

Chabot said the reserve is the province's first closed reserve, and the potential for conflict with cattle will be "much greater" than in any other reserve, according to the province's Natural Resources Minister, Rick Chabot.

Chamber will try again with brainstorming session

By Dale Luman

The Chamber of Commerce will hold another brainstorming session on Feb. 12 in an effort to rejuvenate flagging interest in the Chamber.

At the regular meeting of the Chamber last week, which was attended by only eight members, agreement was reached that something had to be done to re-evaluate goals and objectives and get the Chamber back on the right track.

"At that seminar in Edmonton, we came up with short-term, medium-range and long-term goals, and we have accomplished all the short-term goals, and begun planning for a few of the medium-range goals, but we have done nothing at all have done nothing at all have done nothing at all," said Mr. Denton.

Mr. Denton said that acquisition of other members was the Chamber's top priority, and that the Chamber was looking for ways to attract new members.

New chef in town had colorful career

The new chef at the Drayton Valley Hotel is Pierre Trudeau, played cribbage with John Diefenbaker, dropped Canada's salad on the lap of Mrs. Mayrion Paterson, and had coffee with Prime Minister.

Mr. Trudeau, who trained with the best of chefs at the Quebec Hotel Culinary Arts in France in the late 1960s, says he wants a quiet life now, and he is happy working in Drayton Valley.

Mr. Trudeau first worked at the Hotel Ronge in Paris, where his grandmother, and later his uncle, were executive chefs.

He moved back to Winnipeg in 1960, where he was hired by the Canadian government to serve as private chef to Brigadier General Pennequin in the Korean war.

Mr. Trudeau was in Korea for only six days, when he was wounded on the front lines, and was sent back to Canada.

The Waldorf Astoria was the next hotel at which Mr. Trudeau worked, as a Sous Chef for three years.

He was hired by the Hilton Hotels in 1964, where he worked throughout the country for 10 years.

County employees vote on contract

The County of Parkland has reached a tentative agreement with its public works employees.

Ed Bacon, president of the public works division of the County of Parkland Employees' Association, said Friday that the association members had voted last Wednesday 56-6 in favor of the contract offered by the county.

"I'm not prepared at this time to reveal the details of the contract—until it is officially signed by both parties," Mr. Bacon said.

While declining to be specific on details of the contract, Mr. Bacon did reveal that the length of the contract is one year, and gives the employees an increase of "around 12 per cent."

was travelling throughout R.C. in 1977, Mr. Trudeau says he was hired as their chef.

"Prime Philip is just like one of the boys," he says. "He will walk into the kitchen, grab a cup of coffee and sit down and talk with you." Prime Charles is just like his father, he adds.

Mr. Trudeau says when he was first serving "famous people" he was nervous, but over the years, he gradually formed the attitude that "they are people, just like the rest of us."

One of the most embarrassing incidents in Mr. Trudeau's career occurred when he was working at the Waldorf Astoria in New York.

He was required to take a table full of food up to the penthouse suite and prepare the food for Clark Gable and his friends.

"I was so nervous," he recalls. "I got into the elevator, and had my way up the 60 floors, the elevator got stuck. I took these three-quarters of an hour to get to the elevator. When I finally got to the penthouse, Mr. Gable just said, 'What better late than never.'"

Mr. Trudeau says his three favorite people he has served are John Diefenbaker, Pierre Trudeau and Louis St. Laurent.

During Mr. Diefenbaker's election tour in 1960, Mr. Trudeau was the chef. Every day

PREPARED FILET MIGNON is on the menu, and the new chef at the Drayton Valley Hotel, Las Gards, has had 30 years of practice. Mr. Trudeau recently joined the staff at the hotel after an illustrious career throughout Canada.

Board not support PSS

It was one day of doing something that was not in the best interests of the community, and that was the decision to support the PSS.

Charles H. Hays, president of the Drayton Valley Board of Health, said that the board had voted 10-2 to support the PSS, but that he and the other two dissenting members would not support it.

"I really got upset when we kept referring to government as a giant that was going to take care of us, and the money that we put into the government to take care of us, and we were not getting anything for it," he said.

Charity auction

1981 is the International Year of Disabled Persons. Although the term "disabled" encompasses a wide scope, there is a non-profit organization in Drayton Valley which comes under that umbrella—the Drayton Valley Association for the Developmentally Handicapped.

A $300,000 campaign has been launched in Alberta. The funds will be used for grants and a public awareness campaign to promote full integration of disabled persons into society.

We can do our part, too. The local association is having its annual charity auction on February 19 to gather funds for its many needs.

Although the association does depend a fair amount on community support, 1981 is an extra tough year.

A second residence for trainees at the Beehive Workshop has recently been purchased, and the association needs extra funds for renovations. The wood workshop at the Beehive also needs expansion. These projects are being conducted in order to provide a better way of life for the mentally handicapped to enable them to fully develop their characters and abilities. They need our help.

We can show our support and our understanding by donating old and new items for the auction, and by attending it on February 19.

Pressure building

All the facts followed to their logical conclusion dictate a need for major changes to the federal government's national energy program.

The first outcry when the policy was announced was considered somewhat suspect since it came primarily from the existing oil industry, which has the most to lose under the new rules, and the province of Alberta, which faces the greatest federal intrusion.

However, in the last few months, many other voices, voices not directly connected to the oil industry, have lent their weight and arguments to the demand for change.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the Canadian Chamber of Commerce have both argued for higher oil prices to obtain security of supply.

Executives of two major Canadian banks—the Toronto-Dominion Bank and the Bank of Montreal—have both warned the federal government it is courting disaster with its energy program.

Many politicians, including former federal finance minister Donald Macdonald, former Ontario treasurer Davey McCord have called for higher oil prices.

Even the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada, representing 350 Canadian oil and gas companies—the guys who are supposed to benefit from the NEP—says the program will have disastrous effects.

The warnings have gone beyond mere rhetoric. The sound of fists is a palpable fact, whether the main cause is the NEP or the turn of profits south of the border as the U.S. moves toward full oil control of oil prices.

According to the latest survey of the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors, a full 120 drilling and service rigs will have abandoned Canada by April 30.

The problem, pinpointed by the president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, is that federal leaders are "wedded philosophically and politically to the energy package."

In light of the facts, the only logical conclusion is to make major changes—to scrap the NEP altogether.

It's time the federal government, which has made an error, swallow some of its misplaced pride and arrogance, and implement an energy program acceptable to all concerned parties.

Perspectives

by Dale Lunan

It appears that the Chamber of Commerce has been drifting in the doldrums lately, and although the Chamber has scheduled a brainstorming session for Feb. 12, a long-term program of community involvement will be required if the Chamber is going to achieve a high profile.

The situation at that point was begun last year, when the Chamber held a workshop in Edmonton with members of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, but members need only to look at the example set by the Leduc Chamber.

It, too, has been plagued with the same kind of attitudes that currently plague the Drayton Valley Chamber, but according to Leduc Chamber president Robin Hood, the problems can be overcome.

"I really believe that the biggest thing the Chamber can do, in my town, is set up a very close working relationship with the town administration—without that, it's really difficult to get much of anything done," Hood said.

Apart from the relationship to town council, Mr. Hood believes that the Drayton Valley Chamber, or any other for that matter, should attempt to bring in big name speakers and leaders.

For example, the Leduc Chamber is bringing in Imperial Oil president Jack Armstrong to speak at a meeting next month, and it is these kinds of meetings that Mr. Hood feels do the most good for the Chamber.

Mr. Hood also lists a great number of activities the Leduc Chamber has been involved in in the past two or three years, and the list continues evolving from the proverbial soap to the proverbial rug.

"We opposed the Alberta Valley Safety Act, and we got some changes there, we took over the seniors in business management, discussing things like time management; we have come out with pamphlets advertising Leduc; we are active in sailing clubs and in encouraging the town administration to set Leduc as a model town; we are active in sailing clubs and in encouraging the town administration to set Leduc as a model town; we are active in sailing clubs and in encouraging the town administration to set Leduc as a model town."

It appears that conditions which would allow Leduc to move ahead with their timber project are more favorable, and now would be the time to call Leduc to explain its position, and what has been accomplished.

The businessmen of the Drayton Valley Chamber can't do the same things.

D.V. Women's Institute supports PSS program

Dear Editor:

I am writing on behalf of the Drayton Valley Women's Institute to protest the possible rejection of PSS (Preventive Social Services).

Without people like Mark Pickett's dedication, it would be difficult to form a community.

School is mandatory

Dear Editor:
The Drayton Valley P.E. new skating club would like to hold a summer school. We opened in the recreation board, and feel a summer school is mandatory for the following reasons:

• First of all it has been going for a number of years and we have had no problems. Students are depending on it to further their skating careers.

• We feel the DVPSO will have much by not having a summer school, many skaters will drop out and we feel the winter registration will be drastically affected.

• We are aware that roller skating is marginally more profitable, however, we would like a detailed breakdown of all the expenses of the arena to hold a summer skating school.

The DVPSO is willing to co-operate in any way, in order that we may have at least four weeks of summer skating school for our students.

We are depending on the efforts of the recreation board at this time and are hoping that you all see fit to have a figure skating summer school over more time.

Norma Fraser
President
DVPSO

(A copy of this letter was filed Monday with the recreation board in time for a special meeting Monday night.)

Park turned over to town

After more than 20 years of involvement, the Lions West Valley Park, which was officially turned over to the town of Drayton Valley last week.

The signing ceremony with Lions president Gene Harris, Lions secretary Andy Roberts and town mayor Bob Mayhew took place last Wednesday afternoon.

"It has been one heck of a contribution to the town and the town's help built the roller coaster, the bleachers, the campsite and moved the old second-hand while the approximately 20 years park.

"The cooperation, efforts and the results shown by the Lions over the years are evident and I think Drayton Valley should be thankful for all they've done," said mayor Bob Mayhew.

Problems with maintenance of the park, bookkeeping and occasional vandalism prompted the Lions to turn over responsibility to the town.

"Besides it's better to have an authority responsible in control," said Lions member and town councillor Alex Stahl.

The name of the park will stay the same under the terms of the agreement—the Lions West Valley Park.

The Lions will also have priority to use the park for the annual two-day rodeo but any other events the Lions wish to put on in the park will require booking ahead on a first come, first served basis.

Both Mr. Harris and Mr. Stahl said on the occasion they'd like to thank all the groups, individuals and organizations that helped the Lions develop the park over the years.

Recreation director Don Brews says other community groups have also been involved in development of the park but none to the extent of the Lions Club.

"We are still talking to these groups, such as the credit union, about the agreement we had with them," said Mr. Brews.

THE LIONS West Valley Park was officially turned over to the Town of Drayton Valley last week. After more than 20 years of involvement, the Lions Club no longer has responsibility for maintenance of the park, but will continue to have priority use of the park for its annual two-day rodeo. At the signing ceremony, from left to right, Andy Roberts, secretary of the Lions Club, mayor Bob Mayhew and president of the Lions Club, Gene Harris.

Committee to appear Feb. 19

By M.A. Bishop Crisp
The Bureau Rights League will continue during the month of February.
There will be hearings in Dryden Valley the evening of Feb. 19 at the Watford Motor Inn and at the Watford Lodge the morning of Feb. 20.
It may appear to be hard to resist during February as we are travelling four days a week—that it will be in Dryden Valley on Mondays and if you call me at Edmonton or at home I will return your call when I get back home.
Two major changes to the province's RTE telephone network were recently announced by the minister of Government, Services, Stewart McCrae. While a majority of Albertans were previously able to call government offices toll-free, all Albertans now have telephone access to the nearest RTE centre toll-free.

As a private citizen, you can call the operator and ask for Smith 2228. In one word you will be in contact with an Edmonton RTE operator who can get you through to the appropriate department and individual.
I certainly welcomed this announcement, as everyone in our constituency will now have toll-free access to government when calling a private citizen. Another important change is that if you represent a non-profit organization, you can also use the Smith number.

These two changes will certainly increase access to government, a goal to which I have long been committed. I have been asked about the new gaming regulations many times.
With the appointment of Donald Gordon as chairman, the new Alberta Gaming Commission is well on the way to being established.
The commission will have responsibility for licensing, providing information to the public, and advising your government on potential changes to gaming legislation.
While the Gaming Control Board, Attorney General, will continue to be the legislative body, that decision on license applications will be made by the Gaming Commission. If a license application is recommended to be refused, the Commission will be able to hear interested parties before such a decision is made.
The creation of the commission results from significant public input on gaming in our province, through a Citizens Advisory Committee, and a Citizens Task Force.

A further procedural change to that charitable revenues resulting from gaming need no longer be used only for the benefit of recipients under 21. Further changes are expected, on the advice of the commission.
If you want to know more about charitable changes, or if your group wishes to make application for a license, you can contact the Alberta

Gaming Commission, 8th Floor, 909 10th St., Edmonton, telephone 427-6766, or the Gaming Control Branch, 2023 7th St., Park Square, 10001 Highway 12N, Edmonton, telephone 427-6662.
Please feel free to phone me in Dryden at 462-5565, or in Edmonton at 427-1862. You can also write me at 509 Legislature Building, Edmonton, Alta., T6K 0B6.

Of whom in 1964 killed curlers were equally appreciated.

Second event winners were Les Long, Ross Albrecht, Margaret Dunn and Janet Butler. Second place went to Rick Dunn, Bob Anderson, Lynnette MacKenzie and Ed Lorence.

The third event was won by LeRoy Larsson, Vera Dunn, David Pika and Kelly Hillmark. Gordon Sherwood, Norman Dunn, Harry Dunn and Melville Sherwood won the final event.

Resistant seed doesn't exist

The D.A. Column by Doug Walkey 542-5368

Over the past three or so weeks several people have asked about an "acid resistant" variety of alfalfa. Before I get anyone's hopes up I will have to admit, I checked on current breeding trials of alfalfa with Tom Leppert and found that there are no particular varieties of alfalfa that show any considerable increase in acid (pH 6 or less) tolerance than the others. There is a bit of light on the horizon, though, with the bicarbonate.

One of the problems with alfalfa is its ability to fix nitrogen in the soil. This is a good thing, but it also means that alfalfa is a very good source of nitrogen. This is a good thing, but it also means that alfalfa is a very good source of nitrogen.

seedling, in short, good seed management.

We've all been lured by "acid-inhibited seed" and the issues of poor inoculation.

Recently, while alfalfa will respond poorly to wet and acidic areas, this new alfalfa will increase the tolerance of alfalfa to the acidic soil, and, hopefully, increase production off of these soils. Test values range from 6.5 to 6.8 per cent increase in production on marginal soils.

It is important to note, this has no particular bearing on alfalfa varieties. Increases in pH are the result of the former growing conditions, not the seed itself. Inoculation and appropriate spraying as done in seedling is possible.
